

Our Story: Revering the Past, While Trusting the Future, Sources:

Susan B. Anthony and Ida Husted Harper, The History of Woman Suffrage, Volume IV, The Hollenbeck Press, Indianapolis, 1902. (Project Gutenberg)

Charles Henry Brigham and E.B. Willson, Charles Henry Brigham Memoirs and Papers, Lockwood, Brooks and Company, Boston, 1881.

Charles H. Lytle, Freedom Moves West, Revised Edition, Blackstone Editions, Providence, 2006.

Mavis Greene, "The First Unitarian Church of Ann Arbor, 1865-1965," The First Unitarian Church Centennial Program, 1865 - 1965, Ann Arbor, 1965.

Mark Morrison-Read, Darkening the Doorways: Black Trailblazers and Missed Opportunities in Unitarian Universalism, Skinner House Books, 2011.

Thomas G. Overmire, Things Remembered: First Unitarian Universalist Church of Ann Arbor at 1917 Washtenaw Avenue, Ann Arbor, 1998.

Kenneth W. Phifer, "Who We Were and Are," (sermon) 1998.

Kenneth W. Phifer, "Building A Living Legacy," (sermon) 1999.

E. Scott Polk, "Parish History" unpublished, 1933

Marjorie Reade, The First Unitarian Universalist Church of Ann Arbor: The Story of Our First One Hundred Years, The 1990 Committee of the First Unitarian Universalist Church of Ann Arbor, Michigan, Ann Arbor, May, 1990

Marjorie Reade, History of the First Unitarian Universalist Church: 1965 – 1980, 2007.

Edward H. Redman, Recollections of the Ministry to The First Unitarian Church of Ann Arbor of Edward Homer Redman, 1943 – 1960.

David Robinson, The Unitarians and Universalists, Greenwood Press, Westport, 1985.

William F. Schulz, Making the Manifesto: The Birth of Religious Humanism, Skinner House Books, Boston, 2002.

Seventy-fifth Anniversary Program of the Unitarian Church, Ann Arbor January 21, 1867 – January 21, 1942, Ann Arbor, 1942.

J.T. Sunderland, "'Saved by Hope.' Farewell Sermon in Ann Arbor," (sermon) 1898.

"Unitarians Will Ordain Minister," Ann Arbor News, July, 30, 1949, (Old News, Ann Arbor District Library.)

Interviews with the Reverends Frances A. Dew, Gail R. Geisenhainer, Kenneth W. Phifer and Tom Schade.